Chapter 1 by Story Wars

"Ever since we were old enough to know that we had a "crush" on somebody, we've known that love is no easy task. Every girl remembers their kindergarten "boy friend" who they dated for a day after he gave them a hand-drawn heart that looked kinda like a whale. If every girl can remember that, then they also remember how their kindergarten boyfriend left them for Lila Jameson so he could share her mat with her at nap time.

See? Love's a riddle; an unsolved question that all of humanity wonders about everyday. They think, 'What can I do to make him/her love me?', 'How can I improve to help make them notice me?' This burning question helps fuel a reason for humanity to continue to tick. If there was no love what would there be to strive towards besides money? Love is just a complicated piece of a formula in life.

However, all of that puzzle aside, I will say that love is one of the most powerful, and absolutely wonderful things in life. How would I know? Well, after being in a relationship for a while, you learn things. But I didn't want to tell you about the things I learned throughout my relationship with-" as I came to the end of my soliloquy, I choked on the words as I reached West's name.

"With?" my therapist questioned, knowing the answer.

"With West," I took breath and tried to gain momentum again"I came to tell you all of that stuff that I probably should've let go a long time ago. It's gonna take a while."

The therapist chuckled and stated,"Well I got time."

I smirked and gathered all my thoughts and memories up in a tight bundle, I was finally ready to set them free. "Okay then, lets start. From the beginning..."
